

Miscellaneous people and things

- These people were famous for things they did in the 1920's Houdini was the greatest magician to ever live Amelia Earhart got lost over near Howland island never to be found Charles Lindbergh and his famous Trans-Atlantic flight.

CHARLES LINDBERGH

- he was an american aviator known for his non-stop transatlantic flight. he was also given the medal of honor. his starting aviation career he was a wing walker and parachutist. he created an airplane without a windshield for his transatlantic flight to have less weight using a parascope and side windows. he was also lost in fog and tried to avoid a storm. the flight was 33.5 hours long. and he landed in france.

AMELIA EARHART

- amelia was an important female aviator. she had become the first woman to receive the “distinguished flying cross”. she also set aviation records and wrote books about her piloting experience. she was also known for her tomboyishness during childhood and her ramp she made on a toolshed which was her “first flight” she had a bruised lip torn dress and was exhilarated. she was presumed dead after two years being lost near howland island during a flight around the world.

HARRY HOUDINI

- harry houdini was an escape artist who was presumably the best escape artist during his time and possibly ours. he died of a ruptured appendix at age 52 after being struck multiple times in the abdomen. he had done many escape routines like two different buried alive escapes, straight jacket escapes, upside down escapes, and upside down water torture escapes.

HENRY FORD

- henry ford was the founder of the ford motor company. he introduced the Model T automobile he also introduced the model a automobile. he also introduced the ford airplane company. during WWII not relevant to the 20's at all hitler's representative kurt ludecke showed up at henry fords house for support for nazism germany... i found this bit funny... he turned them down... go patriotism. he was although rewarded the grand cross of the german eagle medal from nazi germany.

SEMPLER MCPHERSON

- I wasn't quite sure if this was the right person but Aimee Semple McPherson or "sister aimee" was in the 1920's and founded the Foursquare Church so I went with that. She was apparently a famous preacher in the 1920's. She also held sermons like a priestess. After her kidnapping scandal in 1926 her ministering wasn't caught by the press so much. She pretty much went downhill all the way to her death or suicide it wasn't really confirmed.

ART DECO STYLE

ART DECO STYLE

- “art deco is based on mathematical geometric shapes” art deco style seems to have come from places with high culture values or ancient cutural values like ancient egypt or babylon.
